Reminder about Membership and Renewals

Executive Board of Carroll County Genealogical Society

November 2013

- All current memberships (with the exception of those who have already paid for 2014) expire December 31, 2013. What does this mean to you? If your membership dues are not received before December 31, it means you no longer have access to the "Members Only Section" of the web site. You will not be able to access any back issues of the quarterlies.
- In the past we have been very lenient with late renewals – sometimes extending them to the end of February – but because of required additional manpower and increased postage, we no longer will mail back issues of quarterlies for late renewals. Your name will be put on the next mailing list.
- Renewals— $25.00—may be made through PayPal on our web site (www.ccgsga.org), or by check and mail to:

Projected Publication Dates

The projected publication dates for our quarterlies are March (cutoff date to receive material February 1); June (cutoff date to receive material May 1); September (cutoff date to receive material August 1); December (cutoff date to receive material November 1).

The cutoff date for our next issue is February 1, 2014. Please see that all genealogical material you wish to have published reaches us by that date. We especially would like to publish your ancestor charts and your family histories. This is an excellent way to let other researchers know what families you are related to.

The Carroll County Genealogical Society, Carroll County, Georgia, membership dues are $25 per person or family, on a calendar basis (January through December). Life memberships are not available. This publication is included at no extra cost in the membership dues, with one copy per family. Membership also entitles you to access the Members Only page on our web site. Former issues of the Quarterly are available at the prices shown on the back page of this issue. They may be ordered from the Carroll County Genealogical Society, P.O. Box 576, Carrollton, GA 30112.

Queries are published free for members. Queries for nonmembers will be published free, based on available space, and the Society reserves the right to edit lengthy queries.

This Society does not assume responsibility for errors in fact or opinion that may appear in articles furnished by its members. We will gladly correct any errors brought to our attention.

President's Message

December 2013

This is the sixteenth time that I have been honored to fill this page with words. Looking back, it appears that I have used this particular time to discuss the results of the work of the nominating committee in obtaining officers for the coming year. I noticed that last year they were not able to get anyone to accept two VIP positions (vice president and secretary). We were able to function by having the president fill in for the vice president's tasks and the library coordinator fill in for the secretary (both corresponding and recording).

Well, this year the nominations committee worked diligently and at the October meeting they reported that they were not able to find anyone willing to accept any office. At the November executive meeting, it was decided that the current officers and committee chairs would serve through the January society meeting (which, according to our bylaws, is our Annual Meeting).

This brings the society to a place where it becomes necessary for us to take a hard look at who we are and who/what we want to be in the future. Therefore, the Annual Meeting in January will determine our future:

- ▶ We will discuss proposed amendments to our bylaws and
- ▶ have a "round table" discussion for the purpose of making plans for activities during 2014.

Current Bylaws state:

"General membership meetings shall be held monthly, except in November"

The proposed change:

"The general membership meeting schedule for the coming year should be presented and voted at the Annual Meeting in January."

Current Bylaws state:

"The Officers of the Society shall be President, Vice President, Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, and Treasurer."

Proposed change:

"The Officers of the Society shall be President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer."

Once again, we will ask for nominations to fill the officer positions.

The society is very blessed to have members step up to assume specific tasks for the work of our various projects. We are very capable of conducting successful activities—our challenge is that coordination is absolutely necessary or the whole thing falls apart.

Please be in thought (yes, even prayer) for your society. Please consider what you would like 2014 meetings/projects/workshops to be. Please consider who among us could/would serve in the necessary positions that coordinate all that we choose to do.

Please be at the January Annual Meeting and let's "keep on keeping on."

Donald Levans
President

The Carrollton Advocate

Abstracted by Ted O. Brooke

Introduction note: The Carrollton Advocate is the earliest extant newspaper of Carroll County. There are only ten issues of this newspaper in existence and four of them are abstracted here: October 5, October 26 and November 16, 1860, and February 15, 1861. This four-page paper was issued on Fridays, beginning on March 21, 1860, as calculated from the issue of August 2, 1860, being Vol. 1 #18. Only items with genealogical value and of local interest are abstracted here. Advertisements and legal notices are abstracted at their first appearance only, although they may appear in successive issues.

The Carrollton Advocate, issue of August 3, 1860 (Vol. 1 #18):
The Library of Congress, "Chronicling America," catalogs this issue as being in original form at Emory University, Atlanta Georgia. This original issue is not abstracted here.

The Carrollton Advocate, issue of September 7, 1860 (Vol. 1 #23):
The Library of Congress, "Chronicling America," catalogs this issue as being in original form at Emory University, Atlanta Georgia. This original issue is not abstracted here.

The Carrollton Advocate, issue of October 5, 1860 (Vol. 1 #27):

Announcement

To the Public. In the first issue of the Advocate it was announced that I had not "entered regularly into the newspaper business." In pursuance of that intention, I have sold my entire interest in this paper (from its commencement) to Mr. J. W. Anderson. I will continue to edit it, however, and have otherwise unlimited control of its columns for a specified time longer. /signed/ Jesse C. Wootten, Carrollton, Sept. 29, 1860.

Carroll Superior Court. The October Term of the Superior Court opened last Monday, his honor Judge Hammond, presiding. No very important cases have been tried up to this time. We will not have space to notice the different political speeches.

Dr. H. M. V. Miller. Read the letter of this gentleman, to be found in another column. He is the same man who addressed the people of this County about a year ago in favor of Aiken's election.

Hack Line. The Hack arrived at this place last Monday, about noon, on its first trip over the line from Newnan, via Carrollton, to Bowdon. It will run tri-weekly. We believe Potts & Co. have the contract.

Public Speaking in Newnan. We had the pleasure of hearing the speeches of Hon. Henry R. Jackson, A. H. Colquitt and M. M. Tidwell delivered in Newnan September 27th.

Tribute of Respect. Carroll Lodge No. 69, Sept. 24, 1860.

Whereas, it has pleased an all-wise Providence to remove from our midst our esteemed brother, James F. Garrison, aged fifty nine years, eight months, and twenty three days. Therefore Resolved. That in the death of brother Garrison, the Fraternity has lost a zealous and faithful member; [eulogy continued]

Resolved, that his bereaved family have the heart-felt sympathy and condolence of this Lodge. /signed/ H. P Wootten, W. B. Conyers, J. M. Redwine, Committee.

We are authorized to announce the name of Col. C. W. Howard, of Greenville, (now Colonel of the 60th regiment, Georgia Militia) as a candidate for Major General of the 9th Division Georgia Militia.

Personal. We see our young friend, Col. A. H. Black, has returned from Milledgeville. He has been absent from our town some four or five weeks. We are glad to see him looking so well on his return; and are of the opinion that the pure and balmy atmosphere about our "Federal Capital" must be quite wholesome.

The Latest News from Montgomery is to the effect that a clause in the Constitution, adapted by the Southern Congress, prohibits the African Slave Trade. Another clause also prohibits the importation of slaves from other states, not members of this Confederacy.

Educational History in the Twentieth Century, Part 3

[Editor's Introduction: In cleaning out the map drawers in Special Collections at Neva Lomason Library, Carrollton, our Library Coordinator found some real treasures. Among those treasures was a folder labeled "Unused material for original typescript for Georgia's Last Frontier by J. C. Bonner."

One of the chapters marked "Out" was titled "Educational History in the Twentieth Century." While some of the information in this chapter did make it into the book, we thought you may enjoy reading what didn't make the cut. This is the third part of four segments of the chapter on educational development in the county.

The society has Mr. Bonner's book for sale ($14) and can be ordered directly from the society (order blank at the back of this quarterly) or may be purchased from Friends of the Library of Neva Lomason if you live in the area.]

The experimental phase of the agricultural school came to an end in 1910, by which time the institution was guaranteed a minimum income from the state of $10,000 a year. In the following year a principal's cottage was constructed, a band was organized, and plans were laid for the construction of a girls' dormitory. The young men adopted a standard dress of military uniforms with felt hats and canvas leggings. This gave them a distinctiveness enjoyed by cadets at private military schools, but the policy proved impracticable and was soon abandoned.

The 1913 registration of 116 boys and twenty girls placed the Carrollton school fourth in rank among the eleven district schools. A record enrollment came in 1915 when 142 boys and twenty-four girls were enrolled, and in the following year registration continued to increase. In 1915 the legislature made an appropriation for a girls dormitory of a sum to be matched by local subscriptions. Within a few months, $4,200 had been subscribed leaving $5,000 more to be raised. Among the donors were Nicholas and Ben Tompkins of Heard County who contributed $100 each. Congressman Adamson gave $1,500 and Coweta County appropriated $1,000. The dormitory, built at a cost of $13,400, stood on the spot formerly occupied by the old entrance to the fair grounds. It was accepted by the trustees on March 15, 1917. The old horseblock of Chief William McIntosh was given as a cornerstone by the Georgia Power Company which now owned the McIntosh Reserve. Up to this time the school had enrolled a total of only three hundred girls, of whom twenty-three had graduated. This was in contrast to twelve hundred boys who had enrolled and seventy who had graduated.

About the time that the new dormitory was opened, America's entry into World War I brought a slight decline in registration. Young men both from the student body and the faculty entered military service. By the end of the war the school's service flag contained 160 stars. Military training was made part of the curriculum in 1917 and 1918. Uniforms and wooden guns were supplied by the students. By 1918 Springfield rifles used in the Spanish-American War were provided by the War Department. "Sugar Loaf Mountain," a hill near Hay's Mill, provided a firing range.

The 1919 term opened on August 26 with 152 students, but the enrollment grew to 170 within ten days. Among the new teachers that year was a teacher of English and history, Martha Munro, a daughter of the first chairman of the school's board of trustees. The former remained on the campus until her death in 1954, bringing to the community an unusual intellect, combined with charm and graciousness. Her future husband, Professor Irvine S. Ingram, was elected to the principalship in 1920, succeeding Professor Melson who had resigned.

Professor Ingram's administration was begun in a period of post-war readjustment, marked by the emergence of basic changes in the state's educational pattern. Although the consolidation of rural schools began as early as 1902, the program did not have legislative sanction until the passage of the Barrett-Rogers Act in 1919, which provided funds for this purpose. Consolidation was further encouraged by the availability of army surplus trucks for the transportation of children and by the improvement of rural roads which began in the early twenties. Significant for the future of the district agricultural schools was the passage of the Smith-Hughes Act in 1917 which provided federal funds for vocational programs, including agriculture and home economics in local high schools. Also, the increase in the number of accredited high schools had been phenomenal since the inauguration of the A. & M. schools early in the century. The number of students enrolled in such high schools in Georgia increased from 420 in 1905 to nearly 13,000 by 1915. The figure reached 59,817 in 1930. These changes abruptly ended the traditional position of the district agricultural schools in the state's pattern of rural education.

The Carrollton A. & M. school was notable for its adjustment to these changes. It helped to inaugurate "the cow, hog, and hen program" of the early 1920s to combat the effects of the boll weevil on cotton growers. The school operated one of the most successful poultry hatcheries in the section, and its pure-bred livestock encouraged the upgrading of herds throughout the area which it served. The institution sponsored adult education and continued a program of summer "normal schools" for teachers. In the late 1920s it inaugurated a new vocational program of secretarial training for both boys and girls. Finally, in 1930, at the beginning of the Great Depression, it cooperated with the Carroll County Board of Education to enroll high school students from the Little Bethel, Sand Hill, Elizabeth Harris, and Pine Grove communities. The county paid only transportation costs.

All of these innovations were accomplished on a small budget. In 1923 income from the state increased from fifteen to twenty thousand dollars, but beginning in 1927 the appropriation was fixed at $15,000. The school's maximum support from public funds never exceeded $30,000 annually, and this amount came in 1930 and in 1931. The final appropriation, for 1933, was cut to half this amount. At this time the school's library did not exceed fifteen hundred volumes.

With these changes in vocational direction, the academic program was not neglected. It had always had a high percentage of its graduates attending the State College of Agriculture but after 1920, when foreign language was removed as an entrance requirement by many colleges, a few began to attend liberal arts colleges. Eight of the thirteen members of the class of 1913 went to college. More than half of the male members of the class of 1921 enrolled in college. Three of these later were awarded doctor's degrees. Of the eleven Carroll County boys enrolled at the University of Georgia in 1926, six were A. & M. alumni. The Carrollton school won the state literary banner at a contest in Athens in 1926. In the previous year it had won second place in the overall athletic and literary contest in which the eleven district agricultural schools participated. It graduated that year forty-five seniors. On May 8, 1929, the school was honored by the presence of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, who delivered the commencement address.

In 1927 the school opened with 180 students, the largest in the institution's history. During the depression years which followed, its registration figures continued at a high level. Between 1924 and 1929, seven of the A. & M. schools (those at Cochran, Douglas, Statesboro, Americus, Tifton, Monroe and Barnesville), abandoned the A. & M. plan, most of them becoming junior colleges. The trustees of the Carrollton school went on record as opposing any change in the status of the institution, despite the fact that considerable sentiment had developed in the state legislature for abolition of the remaining district schools. Finally, in March 1933, the newly-created Board of Regents revealed its plans to abolish the remaining A. & M. schools and also to cease operating Bowdon College. They also announced their intention to create a new junior college in western Georgia.

Carrollton and Bowdon in Carroll County, and Powder Springs in Cobb County each contended for the location of the junior college. A mass meeting of Carrollton citizens planned the community's strategy and later its case was presented to the regents. On April 15 the regents announced that the A. & M. campus at Carrollton would be the location of the institution to be called Wet Georgia College. It would be in effect a consolidation and reorganization of the three institutions in western Georgia which were to be discontinued. Irvine S. Ingram, the principal of the A. & M. School, was named president. This act gave a tangible symbol of continuity to the older institution. In the meantime, however, on December 11, 1931, the A. & M. trustees had held their last meeting, turning over the control of the school to the newly-appointed regents of the University System of Georgia. Only one of these trustees, T. Moreland Zellars, had served the institution continuously from the beginning—a total of more than twenty-five years. Philip Weltner, soon to become chancellor of the University System, delivered the final A. & M. commencement address on April 24, 1933.

Carroll County at this time claimed the largest rural white population in the state. It maintained eight four-year high schools, half of which were accredited. An average of 228 seniors graduated annually from these high schools, a figure considerably above that for any county in western Georgia. The people of the community, as they did in 1907 and 1908, gave their unstinting loyalty and support to the institution in its expanded role. Local civic clubs sponsored the grading of the athletic field and the building of new tennis court. Doctors donated their time for physical examinations of students, and the municipal government of Carrollton contributed materials and labor for sorely needed repairs to buildings.

West Georgia College was designated as a terminal and a transitional institution. Total expenses for the year was $162 for boarding students and thirty-six dollars for commuters. It launched almost immediately into an adult education program which later won national recognition. In 1957 it became a degree-granting institution, three years before its first president retired. By 1965 the institution's registration had reached 2,000 and an instructional staff of approximately one hundred. Fully twenty-five percent of the latter held the doctor's degree. Although one hundred of Georgia's 159 counties were represented in the student body, fifty-eight percent came from six counties in the immediate area. While nearly all of the original A. & M. buildings were intact in 1965, a complete new plant either had been constructed, or was under construction, including a library to seat one thousand students. The library contained in excess of 40,000 volumes.

While Bowdon College technically had been consolidated with two agricultural schools to form West Georgia College, the loyal citizens of the western part of the county were unwilling to give up their institution without a valiant fight. Bowdon College had been forced to struggle for its existence following the brief period of prosperity resulting from an influx of Civil War veterans after 1865. From 1870, when President John M. Richardson resigned, to 1916 when the institution was closed for a brief period, there had been nineteen presidents. Each had served an average of less than three years. The most prominent of these leaders was Dr. John W. Abercrombie who served in 1890-91. He later became president of the University of Alabama and also was a United States senator from that state. Vachel D. Whatley who served from 1897 to 1900, and again from 1907 to 1912, had the longest tenure. Whatley had been instrumental in promoting the construction of a brick building at the college in 1900, the cost of which drained heavily on the resources of the small community. He later resigned to become president of Hutcheson College, a still-born institution at Whitesburg. It was during his second tenure as president at Bowdon that the college reached a peak of enrollment.

In the fall of 1914 the price of cotton fell below seven cents. Maintaining a small college in a farming community was now extremely difficult. Factors other than economic were also having an adverse effect on the institution. The curriculum had not changed perceptibly since the Reconstruction period and academic standards had not received sufficient attention. While mathematics, Latin and Greek still were emphasized in the curriculum, French had been dropped entirely. To meet the new educational trends which had been in evidence since 1890, only English literature and a course in the history of education had been added. The library had only fifteen hundred volumes. The college was forced to close at the end of the 1915-16 term.

In 1919 the state legislature was persuaded to give the college a new lease on life [an editorial note was inserted here: "This is a television commercial cliché for Carter's Pills!"]

by granting it a small annual appropriation. It was reorganized under the name of Bowdon State Normal and Industrial College. In effect it was a branch of the University of Georgia, although it had its own local board of trustees. On January 9, 1922, it opened with sixty-five students under the presidency of George W. Camp of Villa Rica. Camp had received some graduate training at Columbia, Harvard, and the University of Chicago and he held an honorary doctorate in pedagogy from the University Georgia. The college still had no dormitories, although a small one was constructed in 1929. Until 1927 it also conducted a college preparatory department. In that year the college claimed "150 straight college students" and announced the discontinuance of the preparatory division and the inauguration of a four-year degree program.

President Camp was highly successful in keeping student expenses low and he was able to upgrade academic standards. However, he permitted the introduction in 1925 of intercollegiate football, which soon overshadowed the academic purpose of the institution in the minds of many people. In 1929 Coach Clifton (Bud) Harris came to the institution and began a somewhat ambitious program of recruiting athletes and scheduling games. Bowdon teams played such opponents as the University of Miami, Mercer, Oglethorpe, Howard, Stetson, Florida Southern, Rollins, Davis and Elkins, and the University of Chattanooga. Harris' teams won more of these games than they lost.

The inauguration of such a large-scale athletic program proved unfortunate, and the decision to do so was influenced somewhat by the desire of the college to gain statewide recognition. In its post-Civil War years the college had attempted to obtain some regional recognition by awarding honorary degrees. From 1893 to 1914 inclusive it had awarded forty-four such degrees, including twenty doctorates, of which five were honorary Ph.D. degrees. Now under public control and deprived of this public relations largess, the institution was anxious to compensate for its geographic isolation and relative obscurity. However, the athletic program made it more vulnerable to attack by the regents of the University System of Georgia under whose complete control it fell in 1931. As already noted, the regents two years later withdrew state aid, which had never exceeded $27,000 annually.

Following a mass meeting held by citizens of Bowdon, determined efforts were made to keep the college open. F. M. (Buster) Byrd struck the keynote of this movement and expressed the sentiment of the community when he stated in a public meeting that "The state has not only withdrawn its funds but has withdrawn their yoke from around our neck also." The college did re-open, but under the old 1857 charter, and again under the name of Bowdon College. Under President Eldon Dittmore, it began the fall term of 1933 with 330 students, the largest in its history. It seemed that Byrd's statement had been prophetic. However, the continued operation of the college almost bankrupted the town, whose population in 1930 barely exceeded one thousand persons. In an effort to conserve its energies, the institution lowered its rank to that of a junior college in 1934 and, after the 1935-36 term, it ceased altogether. The college property was deeded to the town which had fought its battles so long and nobly against the inexorable tide of historical circumstances. Bowdon College had served Carroll County well. In a spiritual sense it continued to live in the character of the people who had come under its influence. ✱
